

Personality of the week

By The Cantankerous Curloo

After taking on some of the TDRU's real celebrities in Dave Sexton and Scott O'Neill, the Curloo has this week decided to look a little further into the playing ranks of the competition in search of some real talent. This week's Personality of the Week is none other than the Ingham Cane Cutters Sean 'Gun Slinger' Gunston. Sean is a cornerstone of the Ingham front row, held in high regards by his peers for his scrummaging ability due to his superior core strength and technical focus. It has also been brought to the Curloo's attention that Gunston is the reigning TDRU 'King of the Ring' after destroying opponents at a Smart Rugby Course a few years back and is still accepting challengers for a shot at his coveted title. He is very proactive throughout the club putting his hand up for committee and coaching roles in past years, including a stint as President of the Cutters. However, his calling was discovered when he took on the role of fitness coordinator. Gunston had been struggling to deal with the lack of aerobic fitness in the players around him which drove him to make a difference. He was even rewarded a 1st Grade spot last week with the Ross River Redskins but was unable to finish the game after sustaining an injury in the tight. The Cutters are beginning to find the form that took them to the finals last year and as we approach that time of year again are becoming genuine 2nd Grade Premiership contenders.
